

Berkshire farmer strips off for charity

A Berkshire farmer has bared his all for a new charity calendar, according to icBerkshire.co.uk.

David Riley was talked into appearing in the calendar alongside former colleague David Ogen as Mr October and Mr June respectively.

The brave Buckleberry man was put up to it by his workmates and agreed to the nude snaps to help agricultural charities.

“My wife saw the calendar for sale at a local shop and the reality is sinking in now. But we are all the same underneath so it’s no fuss,” he told the website.

David’s blushes were all in the name of the 2007 Farmers Calendar, with a separate version featuring men and women.

The charity calendars have been printed since 2000, each year featuring 12 new lads and lasses from farms, with strategically placed limbs, tools and even farmyard animals.

Proceeds from the £4.99 calendars go to help the Royal Agricultural Benevolent Institution and a city farm in London.
