

Trinny and Susannah briefly encounter Reading

Fashionistas Trinny and Susannah visited Reading yesterday (Tuesday) as part of the filming of their TV show.

The duo were in The Oracle shopping centre to help out any with any wardrobe malfunctions or fashion mishaps that the inhabitants of the area may have, the Reading Evening Post reports.

Armed with their Pink Pod the pair were filming an underwear-related feature for their show, Trinny and Susannah Undress The Nation.

Local ladies were asked to bring along their worst pair of knickers along to the shopping centre, so that they could be used as part of the programme.

Filming took place in the Oracle and department store John Lewis and is due to be aired on ITV next summer.

The fashion fanatics first appeared on the BBC with their What not to Wear series in 2001, as well as appearing as makeover experts in The Oprah Winfrey show in the US.

www.businessinberkshire.co.uk

