

Firm returns to Slough Trading Estate

An industrial hose supplier has announced that it will return to Slough Trading Estate.

Springbok Connections has stated that it will move into new premises that will total 3,218 sq ft in space, reports Property Mall.com.

From the new base, the company is set to supply an around the clock emergency replacement service for firms who need to utilise industrial or hydraulic hoses.

Managing director of the company Karl Shaw stated that the continued expansion of the company has resulted in it moving into fresh premises.

“Due to the expansion of our product range I chose to return to Slough Trading Estate, where the management team helped me obtain suitable premises in Ipswich Road. We now have a much larger client base,” he commented.

In addition, the firm offers specialist clothing products that can be worn when using hoses.

The company initially moved away from the site after acquiring its current operating name, which was another company.

Slough Trading Estate was the first business park in the UK and houses a number of other firms including Yell and GlaxoSmithKline.
