

Reduce, reuse, recycle in the workplace

Like most people, you probably already recycle at home, using the bins provided by the local council.

You go to the bottle-bank with your glass. Maybe you even compost your green waste. Are you as diligent at work?

Work-places are lagging behind homes in putting the “reduce, reuse, recycle” message into action. If you’re a business owner, Facilities Manager or Director, have you ever thought about recycling and managing waste at work?

Perhaps you think recycling office waste is too time-consuming or expensive. Perhaps you’ve tried to discover the details of local schemes and have found them impractical or inflexible. If you’re an SME, perhaps you don’t think your work-place generates enough waste to worry about.

The truth is that UK businesses generate 45% of the country’s carbon emissions. Recycling in the work-place is serious business. Green-a-way urge you to address these concerns and put a sustainable, practical and cost-effective recycling scheme into place at your office. You’ll be helping the environment, boosting your green credentials and emphasising your approach to corporate social responsibility.

Green-a-way are office recycling, cleaning and secure shredding experts who are always happy to discuss a bespoke solution to your business’s waste management needs. Contact them to see how their one-stop-shop service can benefit you.
